Hi,

I "almost" had a Superfit -- I say almost because it was a nightmare working with the company and they have a very long wait time, and they say that you are supposed to send your ring in annually for inspection which really turned me off considering that their wait time is min. 6 weeks. Also, you need this little instrument thingy to open it. Oh, the other thing that REALLY turned me off was that your ring has to be a certain width and thickness to accommodate the superfit shank. So, what happened was my jeweler made me the most beautiful ring ever, sends it off to get the superfit shank put on, and because the superfit piece is clearly not "dainty" or "delicate" like my new ring was, the jeweler had to remake the ring to accommodate the superfit shank, only this time the ring looked like a morphed out, ugly piece of jewelry on steroids! That is the best way I can describe it.
